JOEY TRAVOLTA'S INCLUSION FILMS, FUTURES EXPLORED, INC. AND E&CO LAUNCH SUBSCRIPTION-BASED ENTERTAINMENT CHANNEL

First of its Kind Online Channel Will Feature Content from Talented Filmmakers with Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities

LIVERMORE, Calif. (June 11, 2018) – Joey Travolta's Inclusion Films and two non-profit organizations that support adults with developmental disabilities, Futures Explored, Inc., and E&CO, today announced the launch of a subscription-based channel featuring digital content produced by adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities. The first-of-its-kind channel will present short films, documentaries, news stories, original series, special features and behind-the-scenes footage. (See official promo video here: <https://youtu.be/Ec4tchcmwMU>.)

"We are incredibly proud to introduce this groundbreaking platform that provides a global stage for individuals with disabilities to show off their filmmaking talents while delivering interesting and entertaining content to viewers," said Joey Travolta, actor, director and founder of Inclusion Films. "We hope people will subscribe to Inclusion Networks and see for themselves how impressive and unique the content is. By building a broad subscriber base, we'll be promoting the arts and simultaneously monetizing employment opportunities for people with disabilities."

In California, a staggering 85% to 92% of adults with autism and intellectual disabilities of working age are unemployed, and nationally there are twice as many unemployed adults with disabilities than that of adults with no disabilities. Travolta has made it his life's work to open new doors for these individuals. He launched his popular Short Film Camps over a decade ago, and has spent the past several years opening vocational film and media workshops for adult students to learn all aspects of filmmaking. Building on the success of the camps and workshops, Travolta and Futures Explored, Inc. created their own full-service production company that employs adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

"It has been our mission for over 50 years to help cultivate employment and community opportunities for adults with developmental disabilities," said Will Sanford, Executive Director, Futures Explored, Inc. "What we've seen time and time again is that when you provide them basic opportunity, their potential is limitless. Collaborating with Travolta's film camps, workshops and now Inclusion Networks, has been really inspiring. We're creating a new realm of possibilities for these truly talented individuals who all too often remain on the outside looking in."

Inclusion Networks subscribers will enjoy updated content every two weeks with a monthly subscription cost of just $5.99. Inclusion Networks uses Vimeo as its online video-sharing platform. For more information and to subscribe, visit: <https://inclusionnetworks.vhx.tv/>.

In addition to launching Inclusion Networks, Travolta is ramping up for his summer program, which teaches teens and young adults with high-functioning autism and Asperger's Syndrome the foundational principles of filmmaking. Travolta collaborates with non-profit partners throughout the country to organize each two-week session where campers work together in small groups to develop a script, act, and shoot their film with professional support and equipment. The camps encourage communication, confidence, and collaboration through acting and digital filmmaking. Following are upcoming Joey Travolta Short Film Camp dates and locations:
